1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 16-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being incomplete for omitting essential structural cooperative relationships of elements, such omission amounting to a gap between the necessary structural connections. See MPEP § 2172.01. The omitted structural cooperative relationships are: The pump bulb is not connected to the rest of the device.

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Almli et al

The applied reference has a common Assignee with the instant application.

Based upon the earlier effective U.S. filing date of the reference, it constitutes prior art under 35 U.S.C. 102(e). This rejection under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) might be overcome either by a showing under 37 CFR 1.132 that any invention disclosed but not claimed in the reference was derived from the inventor of this application and is thus not the invention "by another," or by an appropriate showing under 37 CFR 1.131.

Almli et al discloses the claimed device and teaches that the textured surface not only helps identify the correct position but also serves to prevent slippage during compression of the housing (column 3, line 66-column 4, line 2). As shown in Figure 1 the protrusions (40) are spaced apart, discrete and discontinuous and would inherently resist movement between the tissue and the device in multiple directions.

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ripple et al or Fogarty in view of Wong.

As discussed in the background of applicant's invention, Ripple et al and Fogarty both disclose implantable penile prosthesis wherein the pump includes a plurality of ridges and grooves to prevent slippage during use. Wong discloses a grip (26) that has a plurality of protrusions and grooves that are discrete, discontinuous and spaced apart to aid in gripping the device. A modification of Ripple et al or Fogarty to include the gripping means of Wong would have been obvious since these are considered to be functionally equivalent gripping means. The gripping means of Wong would also be capable of preventing movement of the device relative to tissue. Further to include such a gripping means on any part of the device, such as the housing, would have been obvious to allow for better gripping and prevent any undesired movement.
